CORPORATE REPUTATION MATTERS

Your corporate reputation is a valuable commodity and can deliver a significant competitive advantage. It can drive commercial performance, influence policy, nurture a committed workforce and maintain the credibility of your brand within society. Moreover, it can help to protect your organisation in the event of a crisis and other areas of corporate risk.

Are you actively managing your reputation?
Is your reputation at risk?

1

COMMERCIAL

Are you fully leveraging your reputation for growth?

2

POLITICAL

Are you able to effectively address policy and regulatory challenges?

3

INTERNAL

Are you able to recruit and retain the best people?

4

BRAND

Are you delivering on your brand promises?

“ Only 59% of respondents overall ‘strongly’ agree that their organisations have a credible and compelling narrative that addresses cross stakeholder expectations and aligns with corporate purpose. ”

DELIVERING VALUE TO SOCIETY

Today, a broader range of stakeholders look at how a business, its management and the products and services it provides are valued and appreciated by the communities in which they live, work and play.

Reputation is being driven by:

- Volatile global markets
- More informed employees
- Increasingly vocal customers
- More transparency and empowered regulators
- More intimate relationships between policymakers and the public

An organisation today is more accountable for its actions.

These actions drive corporate reputation.

RESPECT | How an organisation behaves ethically – are you admired and trusted?

RELIABILITY | How an organisation stands behind its products & services – are you offering a consistent quality service?

REACH | How an organisation performs financially – do you have a credible vision that positions you for future growth?

RESPONSIBILITY | How an organisation accounts for its social and environmental activities – do you take responsibility for your actions?

Good reputation is a combination of:

Your leadership qualities

Your financial performance

Your corporate citizenship

Your products and services

Your innovation pipeline

Your workplace environment

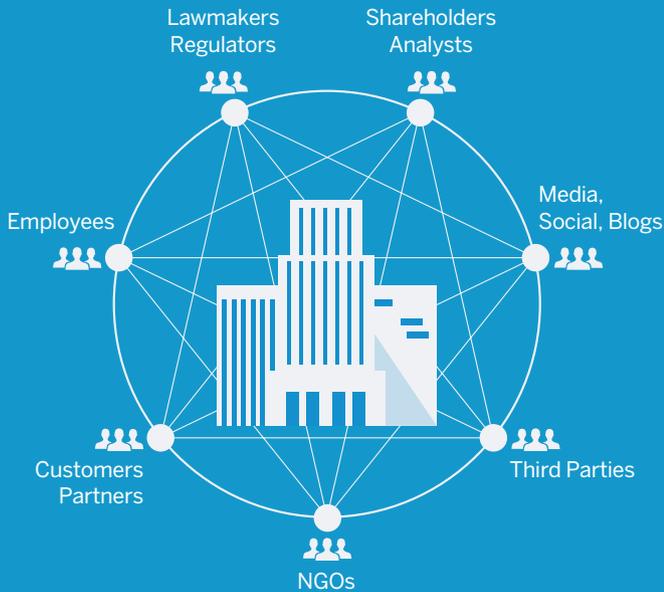

Your governance standards

COMMUNICATION DRIVES REPUTATION

Every communication is an opportunity to protect or promote your reputation.

In an increasingly interconnected world, stakeholders have access to more information than ever before. How they receive and digest their news is challenging the corporate landscape and requires a more sophisticated approach.

PREPARATION IS KEY

Your business has to consider a number of newly emerging opportunities or potential threats that could all have an impact on your reputation. However many businesses do not have adequate reputation management protocols in place.

Being prepared gives you an opportunity to demonstrate the full value of your business.

It means you are in a more agile position to take full advantage of future opportunities and better able to adapt to commercial, political, internal or brand risk.

“The way to gain good reputation is to endeavour to be what you desire to appear,”
